EDITORIAL

The health care system in our country is undergoing rapid metamorphosis to prepare itself to meet the challenges of health management in the next century. As the next millennium dawns, it is expected that indigenous efforts in drug development would be consolidated and trained professional personnel shall be better equipped to combat diseases. The pharmacists to 21st century have enormous responsibility on their shoulders to ensure better health management in India. The quality of services rendered by pharmacists are going to be held accountable by the society. In view of this, it shall be the endeavour of Pharmacy Council of India, to prepare such quality-conscious cadres of pharmacists committed to the cause of profession.
